Principal the summary of the facts as given in it. Fuirbairn preached an able discourse from the the main point in the case seems really text "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy," to have been passed over. The facts as proceeded to ordain the two young men set forth are as follows. It appears that one act, laying a hand on the head of each about the middle of the month of June, 250 Dr. Andrew Bonar then addressed the blocks of Tin were shipped in Hongkong on happy atrain. He congratulated them upon board the steamer Ningpo for transmission the stimulus which they would have to Shanghai. The bills of lading were signed China from the thought that if they did not by the firm of Messrs. Siemssen & Co. in | no one else would. China was represented Hongkong, as agents of the steamer Ningpo. the occasion by the Rev. George Smith, They contained the name of the Captain, J. M. Swatow, and the Rev. W. The occasion was an merchandise shipped was to be delivered up unusually interesting one, and notwithstanding in Shanghai, to the bearer of the bills lading. The goods on arriving at Shanghai, filled, and there was a large attendance of the were discharged at an English wharf. The plaintiffs were in possession of the bills of lading, but were unable to obtain the goods, because the manager of the wharf can only deliver them up after the bills of lading shall have been countersigned by the Shanghai agents of the steamer. Upon this, the plaintiffs contended that, according to the local custom of this port, the defendants were bound to countersign the bills of lading; and prayed that the Court sentence the defendants to that effect, and also condomn them in the costs and payment of compensation for such loss as their refusal may have caused to the plaintiffs. The defendants, on the contrary, answered, that as agents of the steamer Ningpo they were not personally responsible for the actions of the Captain, and that the suit could not be brought against them, but should be against the Captain of the vessel, and added that as the shipper of the goods had obtained them by caud, the plaintiffs were not legally outitled to a goods.

they stood in the position of agents to receive the goods from the ship and deliver them to the consignous. Under the circumstances it might be a question whether the case, notwithstanding the rule as to agents of steamors might not lie against them, the connecceased when the goods left the vessel. It is quite possible, no doubt, that the ground which they alleged for not delivering the goods, namely, that the shipper had obtained them fraudulently, was valid, and we make no doubt that Messre. Stemssen & Cd. would not have adopted so strong a measure without being tolorably certain of their grounds. but it is to be regretted this point is passed over, and the decision based merely upon the technical ground that, as agents, they were naturally given cause to some surprise, and to a misapprohension of the true merits of now $30,000. SAILING IN THE AIR. The large balloon "Sierra Nevada," carrying Mr. Etienne Buislay and companions, did not stay up in the mid-sir on Sunday night, and so the occupants escaped being frozen to death. The balloon was suchored; on the Sugar-Loaf, about four miles from Latrobe, El Derado county, at nine o'clock in Sunday evening, and was kent there all night. At seven o'clock yesterday morning the balloon was again allowed to rise, Buislay and McRoberts going in her, and Adams remaining on torra firma. The donor, Would the widow send up her name? daring voyagers stripped the frame work from the basket and threw out the ropes to increase the buoyancy of the balloon, and left with but eighty-five pounds of ballast. The balloon rose rapidly to the height of a mile, and moved north-east before a stiff breeze. It passed over Georgetown, El Corado county, about a quarter before eight o'clock, and at five o'clock this afternoon was seen over Forest Hill. As the voyagers had sent down their overcoats by Adams, it is plain that they would make no effort to remain up last night, and they doubtless brought down the balloon before sundown.

SINGULAR SPECULATIONS IN THE

Archeologists, says the Levent Herald, have of late years turned their attention largely to the recovery of the vast remains of autiquity which are known to abound all over Turkey. Oyprus, Ephesus, Nineveb, the Trond; and other classical sites have been probed with pick and spade, and the search has generally been productive of discoveries valuable alike to the speculator and to the student. Hitherto the search has been directed rather to objects of early antiquity than to those relies of the middle ages; of which Crete and Rhodes are the principal repositories, are found scattered in the shape of old fortresses and castles along the shores of the Mediterranean. Founding, expectation upon a popular tradition, a company is now, it appears, soliciting from the Turkish Government a firman for dredging the nort of Rhodes for the bronze gans and culverins which are said to have been committed to the waters in the times of the beroic struggle between the Knights of St. John and the mighty Solymun. The petitioners offer to give the Government one third of all that they may recover. Speculation rather than archaelogy is supposed to be the main incentive in the proposed enterpriso.

HINT TO SMOKERS. Dr. Heabel has been making experiments upon tobacco smoke, by condensing the smoke of organs, and washing it in water and alcobol. He has obtained a solution which is capable of producing the effects of misotiue, and also detected its presence in the form of sults. from which he concludes that the injurious effects of smoking must be ascribed in part to the absorption of nicotine. After a number of experiments made by ourselves upon tobacco moke, extending over a long series of years, and consisting of inhaling the smoke through a tube with a bowl at the other end, and also through tobacco leaves brought from Hayana. and parefully manipulated in Connecticut, we are enabled to inform the learned doctor that we have made a discovery which will most effectually take the sting out of "Old Nick." and enable the smoker of the future to enjoy his | mee to local trader. caldmet in peace. SCOTTISH HYMNOLOGY. The want of a Scottish hymnology it is not difficult to explain. The demand for THE SECOND COLONIAL SEA AND sacred lyrics has been abundantly satisfied by metrical translations of the Psalms. The reason of this may not be readily discovered but the fact is certain, and the Psalms have thus come to be intricately interwoven with the religious sentiments of the Scottish people. The strength of this attachment it is impossible for an alien to realise. It is observable, not so much in the fanatical horror with which many congregations shrink from using in the service hymns " of merely human composition," as in the warmth of affection with which the old Psalter is spoken of even by those whose culture might be supposed to be offended by its rude versification. This attachment to the Psalms will probably be traced to peculiarities in the religious character of the Scotch, as developed by the scenery of their country, by their history, and by the Reformation. But whatever may have been the cause of this attachment, few will fail to ascribe to it the offect of imparting to Scottish piety the prominently Old Testament type by which it has been generally marked. -The Ballads und Songe of Scotland.

A LOVE ADVENTURE. One writer has related a curious legend of Eginhard, the secretary of Charlemagne, anent the subject of marriage, in which daughter of the Emperor bimself played most conspicuous part. The secretary fel desperately in love with the princess, who at length allowed his advances. One winter's night his visit was prolonged to a late hour, and in the mountime a deep fall of snow had fallen. It he left, his footmarks would betray him, and yet to remain longer would expose him no less to danger. At length the princess resolved to carry him on her back to a neighbouring house, which she did. It happened, however, that from the window of his chamber the Emperor witnessed this noval proceeding; and in the assembly of the lords on the following day, when Eginbard and his daughter were present, be asked what THREE and ONE THIRD PER CENTA ought to be done to a man who should com- (331 %) on Local Risks only. pel a king's daughter to carry bim on her shoulders through frost and snow on a winter's night? They answered that he wasworthy of death. The lovers became alarmed, but the Emperor, addressing Eginburd, said-"Had'st thou loved my daughter, thou shouldst have come to me; theu art worthy of death-but I give thee two lives : take thy fair porter in marriage, fear God, and love one enother." This was worthy of the greatest of princes, and also worthy the initiation of many a purse-proud aristocrat of later time. - Woman: By Henry Smith, M.D. THE WEDDING BING.
